Indiana, which was a part of the Northwest Territory, was admitted to the Union as a state in 1816, but this part of Fayette County now known as Fairview Township was not open to settlement until 1820. It had been obtained by a treaty with the Delaware Indians in 1818. The land office was at Brookville. The Township as it now stands was organized Dec. 5, 1851.

The first concern of the people was to build homes, schools, and churches, but the land had to be cleared, swamps drained, and disease combatted. In 1855, a citizen gave land for the establishment of a school just over the Rush County line west of Fairview. The structure was a one room log cabin with clapboard roof and puncheon floors. It was used for a Methodist Church as well as a school. A Christian Church was organized in 1842 and due to the influence of some of its members an academy was erected and ready for use in 1850. Fairview then became known as an educational center and students from many states came to the Fairview Academy for higher learning. After a successful career, it closed in 1885 when some of the facilities were transferred to Indianapolis. This was the forerunner of what is now Butler University. A part of the academy building still stands back of the Christian Church and is being used for a dwelling.

As a result of the consolidation of the Falmouth and Fairview grade schools, the first Fairview High School was ready for use in the fall of 1890. It was a four-room frame building located where the present brick building now stands. The first eighth grade commencements, five years before the state superintendent had arranged a regular eight-year course and promotion to high school.

This frame building burned during the holiday vacation in 1903. The Falmouth I.O.O.F. building was made ready and school continued but no commencement was held. Following this disaster the west part of the present brick building was erected and school was continued. In 1913 the first rural Parnet-Teacher group in the state was organized here at the Fairview High School. It was through their influence that an addition was made to the building in 1914, adding more class rooms and a gymnasium. They had in mind the establishment of the first Domestic Science Class in the state of Indiana under the new law. This was the only gymnasium in the county outside of Cornersville and it was considered adequate for holding tournaments and some of the surrounding high schools rented it to play their games.

Up to the present time 432 pupils have graduated from Fairview High. Among these are to be found the following: Congressmen 2, Judges 1, Auditors 3, Lawyers 6, Nurses 7, Engineers 2, Pharmacists 3, bakers 3, Doctors 4, Chemists 3, Teachers 39, and other occupations too numerous to mention.

At present five graduates are enrolled in college, namely: Ed Gravitt, John Shields, Bob Dickson, Phyllis Heinig, and Larry Stephens.

History of Biology

Class Officers

Even the savage is gifted with some powers of observation. He can divide living matter into 2 divisions of plants and animals. He can further divide these into trees, shrubs, birds, and fish. In so far as he is able to do this he is in some extent a biologist.

Beginning with the 16th century the study of biological science began to subdivide into specialized branches, which were botany and zoology.

Botany is the study of plants and zoology is the study of animals.

In the 17th century the vein and the circulation of blood was discovered and studied, thus opening a new branch of anatomy.

With the 18th century came the beginning of the science of organic chemistry, also began the investigation of muscular irritability.

In the 19th century much attention was given to animal and their organisms.

The 20th century brought forth researches on heredity. This was carried on steadily for the first 2 decades, and then it was on the whole, confirmed as to what it really was.

So really Biology is the science of life. As commonly understood, however, biology is the study of the general principles concerning the origin, development, structure, function, reproduction, and distribution of plant life.

Teen-age son: Dad, will you help me find the least common denominator in this problem?

Dad: Why, son, don't you tell me that hasn't been found yet! They were looking for it when I was in school.

Doctor: I've examined you thoroughly and all you need is a little rest.

Lady: But doctor, I need medicine! Look at my tongue!

Doctor: I did. That's what needs the most rest.
